INTRODUCTION.

We love the flowers. Not only do they please the eye, and gratify the sense, but to one of a reflective turn of mind they are the dispensers of instruction. Flowers add a charm to domestic life which nothing else can impart. What high encomiums have been lavishly bestowed upon "vine-clad cottages"! and how often in our readings do we find notice taken of some beautiful geranium that sheds its sweet fragrance around the room!

After a dreary winter, with what pleasure we hail the little primrose, that, peering above the ground, whispers of the coming spring, telling us that Winter's reign is over, that the time of flowers has come, and that Flora will soon hold her jubilee on earth! And as spring advances and retreats, followed by summer, that season which more fully displays the beauties of Flora's kingdom, with what light and joyous hearts we walk amid those beauties, watch the unfolding leaf, or gather to ourselves those gems with which the Queen of Flowers delights to deck her crown!

Flowers are the smiles of nature, and earth would seem a desert without them. How profuse is nature in the bestowment of her smiles! They are seen on every hill-side and in every valley; they cheer the traveller on his public way, and the hermit in his seclusion. Wherever the light of day reaches, you will find them, and none so poor they cannot possess them. They grew first in Paradise, and bring to our view more vividly than any thing else the beauties of Eden.
It is no new thing to attach sentiments to flowers. In Eastern lands, flowers have a language which all understand. It is that "still small voice" which is powerful on account of its silence. "It is one of the chief amusements of the Greek girls to drop these symbols of their esteem or scorn upon the various passengers who pass their lattice'd windows." And the traveller can read upon Egyptian rocks accounts of the conquests of that ancient people, recorded by foreign plants.

The name which we have chosen for this little volume we deem most appropriate for a work of this kind. As long as sentiments have been attached to flowers, so long has Flora kept an Album on the pages of which she has faithfully inscribed them. We do not profess to have found this Album, as books have been found, on the dusty shelves of old and neglected libraries; but we found scattered here and there, leaves, which by the sentiments inscribed upon them we felt assured rightly belonged to such a work. We therefore collected them; and, when they were collected, we found we had in our possession a complete copy of "Flora's Album."

With these few words we introduce this volume to your notice, and trust that our endeavors to please will meet the approbation of the public.

CONCEALED LOVE.

No searching eye can pierce the veil
That o'er my secret love is thrown;
No outward signs reveal its tale,
But to my bosom known.
Thus, like the spark, whose vivid light
In the dark flint is hid from sight,
It dwells within alone.

Mrs. Hemans.

Do any thing but love; or, if thou lovest,
And art a woman, hide thy love from him
Whom thou dost worship; never let him know
How dear he is; flit like a bird before him;
Lead him from tree to tree, from flower to flower;
But be not won; or thou wilt, like that bird,
When caught and caged, be left to pine neglected,
And perish in forgetfulness.

A R T.

When, from the sacred garden driven,
Man fled before his Maker's wrath,
An angel left her place in heaven,
And crossed the wanderer's sunless path.
'T was Art! sweet Art! New radiance broke
Where her bright foot flew o'er the ground,
And thus with seraph voice she spoke:
"The curse a blessing shall be found."

She led him through the trackless wild,
Where noontide's sunbeam never blazed;
The thistle shrunk, the harvest smiled,
And Nature gladdened as she gazed.
Earth's thousand tribes of living things,
At Art's command to him are given;
The village grows, the city springs,
And point their spires of faith to heaven.

Heedlessness.

I knew a lady once
Who was very beautiful,
Very fair to look upon,
And very dutiful.
Yet in this she erred,
What was very needless;
She would do, and what is more,
Do it very heedless.

She received a letter
Full of tender sighs,
And she read it over
Till her little eyes
Filled with tears, and her heart
Was about to melt,
When suddenly she thought about
The paper that she felt.

It was coarse; and she said,
"He must be a liar;"
So she tore the letter up,
And put it in the fire.
But afterwards she did repent,
And said it was needless;
And vowed she never more would do
Any thing so heedless.  J. S. Adams

Immortality.

Oh, listen, man!
A voice within us speaks the startling word,
"Man, thou shalt never die!" Celestial voices
Hymn it around our souls; according harps,
By angel fingers touched when the mild stars
Of morning sang together, sound forth still
The song of our great immortality!
Thick, clustering orbs, and this our fair domain,
The tall, dark mountains, and the deep-toned seas,
Join in this solemn, universal song.

* * *

The dying hear it; and, as sounds of earth
Grow dull and distant, wake their passing souls
To mingle in this heavenly harmony.

Ah! whither strays the immortal mind?
It cannot die, it cannot stay,
But leaves its darkened dust behind.

WORTII BEYOND BEAUTY.

They tell me that thou art not fair,
That beauty is not thine;
That from thine eye no glance is thrown
Which they might call "divine."

They laugh at me because I chose
Thee from the giddy throng;
But they do not know the treasures dear
That to thy heart belong.

Beauty, when sickness comes, will fade,
'Twill faint, and droop, and die;
But Worth with tenfold power will shine,
When sorrows gather nigh.

For what is Beauty? 't is as dreams,
That quickly pass away;
And what is Worth? 't is what it seems,
And never will decay.

True worth will live beyond the grave,
'Twill pierce Death's shadowy mist,
And near the throne of God on high
Eternally exist.

WELCOME TO A STRANGER.

Lady, thou camest from a stranger land,
   And little of thee I know;
Yet thou art joined to the fading band
   Of travellers here below.

And thou art of woman’s form and mien,
   Hast a woman’s heart within;
And, by thine eye and thy brow, I ween
   Her sorrows with thee have been.

Thy Father is mine, and mine is thine;
   We both are his equal care;
His goodness, and love, and blessings benign,
   We each as his children share.

In sympathy, then, I give thee a hand
   And greet thee as thus we go,
And pledge a renewal in that bright land
   Where pleasures perennial grow.

FORSAKEN.

As some lone bird without a mate,
My weary heart is desolate;
I look around, and cannot trace
One friendly smile or welcome face,
And ever in crowds am still alone,
Because I cannot love but one.

The poorest, veriest wretch on earth
Still finds some hospitable hearth,
Where friendship's or love's softer glow
May smile in joy or soothe in woe;
But friend or leman I have none,
Because I cannot love but one.

I go,—but whereso'er I flee,
There's not an eye will weep for me;
There's not a kind, congenial heart,
Where I can claim the meanest part;
And thou who hast my hopes undone,
Wilt sigh, although I love but one.

PAINTING.

Then first from Love, in Nature's bowers,
Did Painting learn he. fairy skill,
And cull the hues of loveliest flowers,
To picture woman lovelier still.

For vain was every radiant hue,
Till passion lent a soul to art,
And taught the painter, ere he drew,
To fix the mode: in his heart.

Thus smooth awhile his toil went on,
Till, lo! one touch his art defies:
The brow, the lips, the blushes shone;
But who could care to paint those eyes?

'T was all in vain, the painter strove:
So, turning to that boy divine,
"Here, take," he said, "the pencil, Love;
No hands should paint such eyes, but thine."

LAMENTATION.

Well, thou art gone, and I am left;
But oh! how cold and dark to me
This world, of every charm bereft,
Where all was beautiful with thee!

MONTGOMERY.

* * * * But now alone I sit,
Musing of her, and dew with mournful tears
Her little robes, that once with woman's pride
I wrought, as if there were a need to deck
What God had made so beautiful. I start,
Half fancying from her empty crib there comes
A restless sound; and breathed the accustomed words,
"Hush! hush thee, dearest." Then I bend and weep,—
As though it were a sin to speak to one
Whose home is with the angels.

In all the wildest ecstasy of hope,
Ask for its darling like the bliss of heaven?

ROMANCE.

Parent of golden dreams, Romance!
Auspicious queen of childish joys!
Who lead'st along in airy dance
Thy votive train of girls and boys;
At length, in spells no longer bound,
I break the fetters of my youth;
No more I tread thy mystic round,
But leave thy realms for those of Truth.

* * * * *

And yet 't is hard to quit the dreams
Which haunt the unsuspicous soul,
Where every nymph a goddess seems,
Whose eyes through rays immortal roll;
While Fancy holds her boundless reign,
And all assume a varied hue,
When virgins seem no longer vain,
And even woman's smiles are true.

Byron.
Bay Leaf.

"The same through all its little life, —
It changes but in dying." — G. W. Doane.

I CHANGE BUT IN DYING.

I change but in dying, — I 'll be faithful till death;
I will guard thee with care from pollution's foul breath;
I promise that ne'er in neglect thou shalt pine;
I change but in dying, — say, wilt thou be mine?

I come not with riches, good fortune ne'er blest me,
Yet she of less worth, — Miss-fortune carest me;
The light of true love o'er thy pathway shall shine;
I change but in dying, — say, wilt thou be mine?

I change but in dying, and no holier vow
From lips mortal e'er came than I breathe to thee now;
It comes from a heart, with love for thee sighing;
Believe me, 'tis true, — I change but in dying.

GRATITUDE.

The hound will fawn on any one
That greets him with a kind caress;
The flowers will turn toward the sun,
That nurtures it in loveliness.

The drooping bird, with frozen wing,
That feeds in winter at your sill,
Will trim his gossy plumes in spring,
And perch about your window still.

The gazing steed will mark the voice
That rules him with a gentle word;
And we may see the brute rejoice,
As though he loved the tones he heard.

We find the fiercest things that live,
The savage boor, the wildly rude,
When soothed by Mercy’s hand, will give
Some faint response of gratitude.

TREACHERY.

Be it so! we part forever!
Let the past as nothing be;
Had I only loved thee, never
Hadst thou been thus dear to me.

Pride may cool what passion heated,
Time will tame the wayward will;
But the heart in friendship cheated
Throbs with woe's most maddening thrill.

More than woman thou wast to me;
Not as man I looked on thee;—
Why like woman then undo me?
Why "heap man's worst curse on me"?

Live! and when my life is over,
Should thine own be lengthened long,
Thou may'st then, too late, discover
By thy feelings, all my wrong.

But 'tis useless to upbraid thee
With thy past or present state;
What thou wast, my fancy made thee;
What thou art, I know too late.

COURAGE.

Courage! — There is none so poor,
( None of all who wrong endure,) None so humble, none so weak,
But may flush his father's cheek; And his maiden's dear and true,
With the deeds that he may do
Be his days as dark as night, He may make himself a light;
What though sunken be the sun! There are stars when day is done!

Courage! — Who will be a slave,
That has strength to dig a grave, And therein his fetters hide, And lay a tyrant by his side? Courage! — Hope, how'er he fly For a time, can never die! Courage, therefore, brother men! Cry "God and to the fight again!"

CONSTANCY.

She clung to him, with woman's love
Like ivy to the oak,
While on his head, with crushing force,
Earth's chilling tempest broke.

And when the world looked cold on him,
And blight hung on his name,
She soothed his cares with woman's love,
And bade him rise again.

When care had furrowed o'er his brow,
And clouded his young hours;
She wove amidst his crown of thorns,
A wreath of Love's own flowers.

And never did that wreath decay,
Or one bright floweret wither;
For woman's tears e'er nourished them,
That they might bloom forever.

'T is ever thus with woman's love,
True till life's storms have passed;
And like the vine around the tree,
It braves them to the last.

BORAGE.

BLUNTNESS, OR ROUGHNESS OF MANNERS.

When the priest
Should ask, if Katharine should be his wife,
"Ay, by gogs-wouns," quoth he; and swore so loud,
That, all amazed, the priest let fall the book;
And, as he stooped again to take it up,
The mad-brained bridegroom took him such a cuff,
That down fell priest and book, and book and priest;

But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine: A health, quoth he, as if
He had been abroad carousing to his mates
After a storm: quaffed off the muscadel,
And threw the sops all in the sexton’s face!
Having no other reason,—
But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seemed to ask him sops as he was drinking.
This done, he took the bride about the neck;
And kissed her lips with such a clamorous smack,
That, at the parting, all the church did echo.

Music!

Oh how faint, how weak,
Language fades before thy spell!
Why should Feeling ever speak,
When thou canst breathe her soul so well?

Friendship's balmy words may feign,
Love's are e'en more false than they;
Oh! 'tis only Music's strain
Can sweetly soothe, and not betray.

Thomson Moore.

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted.

He, whose stern spirit, unreclaimed,
Nor age has soothed, nor terror tamed,

While o'er the victim's dark-veiled brow
Burst from his soul the voice of woe.

He sue for mercy! He dismayed
By wild words of a timid maid!
He, wronged by Venice, vow to save
Her son, devoted to the grave!
No, — though that cloud were thunder's worst,
And charged to crush him, — let it burst!

Ah! cease, — those fruitless tears restrain,
I go misfortune to defy,
To smile at fate with proved disdain,
To triumph, — not to die.    Mrs. Hemans.

Proudly will I meet thee,
And as proudly pass thee by;
A pitying smile may greet thee,
But I 'll tremble not, not I;
Deep, deep within my soul
Let every sorrow lie, —
Checked be the rising tear;
And hushed be every sigh;
For proudly will I meet thee,
And as proudly pass thee by.

INDIFFERENCE.

I saw a man who had sojourned where
The Saviour once did tabernacle. He Familiar was with Bethlehem, Nazareth; knew
The very site of Jacob's well; had talked
Where Jesus talked, — was intimate with all
The scene of his sad story. Yea, had dwelt
Hard by the Garden, and his daily course
Had taken o'er the soil of Calvary;
And yet he gaily spake of these; and smiled,
And smoothed his chin; and twisted in his hair
His dainty fingers, as with nonchalance
He took upon his lips these sacred names;
And then I thought a man might ransack heaven,
Yet, Gallio like, care not for all these things

DECEPTION.

Deceive no more thyself and me,
Deceive not better hearts than mine;
Ah! shouldst thou, whither wouldst thou flee
From woe like ours, — from shame like thine?
And if there be a wrath divine,
A pang beyond this fleeting breath,
E'en now all future hopes resign,
Such thoughts are guilt, — such guilt is death.

Byron.

Ah that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous vision hide deep vice!

For were it just, and told thee true,
Thou wouldst consult it never more.

Wm. Cowper.
Hast thou sounded the depths of yonder sea,
And counted the sands that under it be?
Hast thou measured the height of heaven above?
Then may'st thou mete out a mother's love.

Hast thou talked with the blessed of leading on
To the throne of God some wandering son?
Hast thou witnessed the angel's bright employ?
Then may'st thou speak of a mother's joy.

Hast thou gone with the traveller in thought, afar,
From pole to pole, and from star to star?
Thou hast; but on ocean, earth, or sea,
The heart of a mother has gone with thee.

There is not a grand, inspiring thought,
There is not a truth by wisdom taught,
There is not a feeling pure and high,
That may not be read in a mother's eye.

There are teachings on earth and sky and air,
The heavens the glory of God declare;
But louder than voice beneath, above,
He is heard to speak in a mother's love.

NIGHT.

I love the light, — yet welcome, Night!
For, beneath thy darkling fall,
The troubled breast is soothed in rest,
And the slave forgets his thrall.

The roar of the city is dying fast,
Its tongues no longer thrill;
The hurrying tread is faint at last,
The artisan’s hammer is still.

Night steals apace. She rules supreme;
A hallowed calm is shed;
No footstep breaks, no whisper wakes,—
’Tis the silence of the dead.

The hollow bay of a distant dog
Bids drowsy echo start;
The chiming hour from an old church tower
Strikes fearfully on the heart.

All spirits are bound in slumber sound,
Save those o’er a death-bed weeping;
Or the soldier one that paces alone,
His guard by the watch fire keeping.

PRIDE OF BIRTH.

My mother, if thou love me, name no more
My noble birth. Sounding at every breath
My noble birth! thou kill'st me. Thither fly,
As to their only refuge, all from whom
Nature withholds all good besides; they boast
Their noble birth, conduct us to the tombs
Of their forefathers, and from age to age
Ascending, trumpet their illustrious race:
But whom has thou beheld, or canst thou name,
Derived from no forefather? Such a man
Lives not; for how could such be born at all?
And if it chance that, native of a land
Far distant, or in infancy deprived
Of all his kindred, one who cannot trace
His origin, exist, why deem him sprung
From baser ancestry than theirs who can?
My mother! he whom nature at his birth
Endowed with virtuous qualities, although
An Ethiopian and a slave, is nobly born.

CHEERFULNESS.—SMILES.

Oh! why delight to wrap the soul
In pall of fancied sadness?
'T were best be merry while we live,
And paint our cheeks with gladness.
What if hope tells a "flattering tale,"
And mocks us by deceiving,
'T is better far to be content:
There's nothing made by grieving.

The girls, Heaven bless their precious souls!
Are thick as bees about us;
And every mother's son well knows,—
They could not do without us:
They're dangerous though to meddle with,
For they too are deceiving;
They'll win and laugh, then flirt you,—yet
There's nothing made by grieving.

DESERPTION.

Dear me! I felt a trifle sad,
When all cried out, "What have you done!"
For, sure enough, I loved the lad:
But who 'd take up with number one?
So, vive l'amour! I gaily cried,
And he, poor wretch, was soon forgot,
For I 'd a hundred sparks beside:
Was I right, or was I not?

But now 't is come into my head,
That I must grow discreet and sage;
For there are hints my charms have fled,
And I approach "a certain age."
So the next offer, — that 's my plan,—
I 'll nail decisive on the spot;
'T is time that I 'd secured my man:
Am I right, or am I not?

But ah! though gladly I 'd say "Yes,"
The looks of all the men say "No."
Who would have thought 't would come to this?
But mother says, "I told you so!"
Friends, lovers, dangleurs, now are gone;
Not one is left of all the lot;
And I 'm a "maiden all forlorn!"
Is it right, or is it not?

TRAVELER'S JOY.

In the depths of the desert, when lonely and drear,
The sands round the desolate traveler appear,
The splendor of day gives no aid to his path,
For landmark nor compass the traveler hath:
But when night sheds her shadow and coolness around,
Then hark! how the bells of the camel resound!
For the traveler is up when the star sheds its ray;
'Tis the light of his hope, 'tis the guide of his way.

And what is this world, but a wilderness vast?
Where few leave a trace o'er the waste they have passed;
And many are lost in their noonday of pride,
That shines forth to dazzle, but seldom to guide.
Oh! blest is the fate of the one who hath found
Some lodestar to guide through the wilderness round;
And such I have found, my beloved one, in thee;
For thou art the star of the desert to me.

Impatience of Absence.

Oh that the day were gone, and men
   Were lost in slumber’s balmy power!
Oh that the night were come, for then
   She said she ‘d meet me in the bower!
And if the sun would only set
   Behind the blue and mantling sea, —
But the west seems receding yet,
   And brings no food for hope to me.

Oh that the night were come, and she
   Were by my side! — her hazel eye,
And the deep witchery of her free
   And playful lip! — the bright, and high,
And changing color of her cheek,—
   These have wrought in my soul; unblest,
They leave a pang too strong to speak,
   And night can only bring me rest.

But oh! how slow the sun goes o’er,

And yet until the day is gone,
   I cannot speak with her I love.

GOSSIP.

The tea goes round, — the gossips drink, — and then
They're all excitement, — how their tongues whirl round! —

My feeble, faltering, dilatory pen
Grows half affrighted 'mid the Babel sound.

Now changed the subject, — and they freely tell
Their neighbors' faults, and quite forget their own?

Pronounce as scamp and vagrant, Mr. Nell,
And vow as such, he does not stand alone.

Pure scandal now! and village gossip flows
In rich profusion from each nimble tongue:
Each all the secrets of her neighbor knows,
And wonders when her praises will be sung.

And then foretells, how that some city youth
Will waste his midnight oil, to write a sonnet
About her beauty and her matchless worth,
With sundry hints about her cottage bonnet;

And 'bout the wedding day, — confound this quill;
'Tis all used up in writing these few rhyhmes;
No matter, — it has got these gossips still,

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Let no one say, that there is need
   Of time, for love to grow;
Ah, no! the love that kills, indeed,
   Despatches at a blow.

The spark, which but by slow degrees
   Is nursed into a flame,
Is habit, friendship, what you please;
   But love is not its name.

For love to be completely true,
   It death at sight should deal;
Should be the first one ever knew;
   In short be that I feel.

To write, to sigh, and to converse,
   For years to play the fool,
'T is to put passion out to nurse,
   And send one's heart to school.

Cross of Jerusa'DEVOTION.

Devoted she, and day by day
Over his couch did watching bend;
And when his spirit passed away,
Her soul with his would fain ascend.

She loved him well, and watched with care
The earth, that made his grave, for years;
She planted fairest flowers there,
And wet them with Devotion's tears.

And well they grew; each blooming flower
Filled her heart with sad emotion;
Yet there she watched, from hour to hour,
Living proof of true devotion.

INNOCENCE.

My heart grew softer as I gazed upon
That youthful mother, as she soothed to rest,
With a low song, her loved and cherished one,—
The bud of promise on her gentle breast;
For 'tis a sight that angel ones above
May stop to gaze on from their bower's of bliss,
When Innocence upon the breast of Love
Is cradled in a sinful world like this.

Yet Innocence may still be seen
In childhood's presence. Who can gaze,
Unmoved upon that brow, serene,
That agile form, those witching ways,
That playfulness of tiny mirth,
That lively joy,— and not confess
That Innocence, still found on earth,
Doth nestle in a child's caress.

WM. B. TAPPAN.
Daisy, Michaelmas.

"Daisies, ye flowers of lowly birth." — CLARE.

FAREWELL.

When eyes are beaming
What never tongue can tell,
When tears are streaming
From their crystal cell;
When hands are linked that dread to part,
And heart is met by throbbing heart,
Oh! bitter, bitter is the smart
Of them that bid farewell!

When hope is chidden
That fain of bliss would tell,
And love forbidden
In the breast to dwell;
When, fettered by a viewless chain,
We turn and gaze, and turn again,
Oh! death were mercy to the pain
Of them that bid farewell!

Gilt with dew, like sun with showers." — Clare.

COQUETRY.

For such are the airs
Of these fanciful fairs,
They thank all our homage a debt;
Yet a partial neglect
Soon takes an effect,
And humbles the proudest coquette.

Then quit her, my friend!
Your bosom defend,
Ere quite with her snares you're beset;
Lest your deep wounded heart,
When incensed by the smart,
Should lead you to curse the coquette.

Byron.

Oh! there are some
Can trifle, in cold vanity, with all
The warm soul's precious throbs; to whom it is
A triumph, that a fond, devoted heart
Is breaking for them; who can bear to call
Young flowers into beauty, and then crush them.

L. E. Landon.
Dead Leaves.

Condemned to fade and flee."

SADNESS.

Her heart was sad, for she bent above
The grave of him whom she well did love;
For years had passed since their plighted vow,
And she could not think of a parting now.

She had watched in sickness, been constant nigh
She fain with him would lie down and die;
Dead leaves were thick strown, that grave, around,
And rustled by with a mournful sound.

The sexton was there with his worn spade,
His snow-white locks in the wild wind played;
She rose from that grave, — she saw him near,
And bade him a stone of remembrance rear.

'Twas asked, what memento that stone should grace;
And as tears rolled down her care-worn face,
She answered, as grief her heart did fill:
"Carve these words alone, — 'I love him still.'"

POETRY.

The world is full of poetry,—the air
Is living with its spirit; and the waves
Dance to the music of its melodies,
And sparkle in its brightness. Earth is veiled
And mantled with its beauty; and the walls,
That close the universe with crystal in,
Are eloquent with voices, that proclaim
The unseen glories of immensity,
In harmonies too perfect and too high,
For aught but beings of celestial mould,
And speak to man in one eternal hymn,
Unfading beauty, and unyielding power.

JAMES G. PERCIVAL.

What to us were this world and its burden of care,
But a fetter of clay, that in slavery bound us;
Were our troubles not soothed by the smiles of the fair,
And if Poetry spread not its magic around us?

Oh! Woman and Poetry, each is a treasure,
A mine cf delight that enriches life's span;
The first is a ministering angel of pleasure;
While the gift of the next makes an angel of man!
Fig Marygold.

"The Marygold that goes to bed with the Sun."

IDleness.

The rain is playing its soft pleasant tune
Fitfully on the sky-light, and the shade
Of the fast flying clouds across my book
Passes with delicate change. My merry fire
Sings cheerfully to itself; my musing cat
Purr as she wakes from her unquiet sleep,
And looks into my face as if she felt
Like me the gentle influence of the rain.
Here have I sat since morn, reading sometimes,
And sometimes listening to the faster fall
Of the large drops,—or, rising with the stir
Of an unbidden thought, have walked awhile,
With the slow steps of indolence, my room;
And then sat down composedly again
To my quaint books of olden poetry.
It is a kind of idleness, I know;
And I am said to be an idle man,
And it is very true.

CONFIDENCE IN HEAVEN.

Let the scholar and divine
Tell us how to pray aright
Let the truths of gospel shine
With their precious hallowed light:
But the prayer a mother taught
Is to me a matchless one;
Eloquent and spirit-fraught
Are the words, — "Thy will be done."

I have searched the sacred page,
I have heard the godly speech;
But the love of saint or sage
Nothing holier can teach.

They have served in pressing need,
Have nerved my heart in every task;
And howsoever my breast may bleed,
No other balm of prayer I ask.
When my whitened lips declare
Life's last sands have almost run,
May the dying breath they bear
Murmur forth, — "Thy will be done."

TRUE LOVE

Oh! what was love made for, if 't is not the same
Thro' joy and thro' torment, thro' glory and shame?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt 's in that heart,
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art.

Thomas Moore.

Dreams of fame and grandeur
End in bitter tears;
True love grows the fonder
By the lapse of years.
Time, and change, and troubles,
Meaner ties unbind;
But the love redoubles
True affection twined.

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.

F I R E.

Blandly glowing, richly bright,
Cheering star of social light;
While I gently heap it higher,
How I bless thee, sparkling fire!
Who loves not the kindling rays
Streaming from the tempered blaze?
Who can sit beneath his hearth,
Dead to feeling, stern to mirth?
Who can watch the crackling pile,
And keep his breast all cold the while?
Fire is good, but it must serve:
Keep it thralled,—for if it swerve
Into freedom's open path,
What shall check its maniac wrath?
Where's the tongue that can proclaim
The fearful work of curbless flame?

* * * * *

Listen, youth! nor scorn nor frown,
Thou must chain thy passions down.
Well to serve, but ill to sway,
Like the fire they must obey.

POVERTY.

Would ye who live in palace halls,
    With servants round to wait,
Know aught of him who craving falls
    Before thine outer gate?
Come with me when the piercing blast
    Is whistling wild and free;
When muffled forms are hurrying past,
    And then his portion see.

I'll lead thee through the narrow lanes,
    To a dwelling dark and damp,
Where the poor man strives to ease his pains;
Where by a feeble lamp
The worse than widowed mother, long
    Doth her busy needle ply,
Whilst round her, children anxious throng,
    And for a morsel cry.

Come with me then in such an hour,
    To such a place, and see
That He who gave thee wealth, gave power
    To stay such misery;
Come with me, — nor with empty hand.
    Ope' thou the poor man's door;
Come, with the produce of thy land,
    And thou shalt gather more

SACRED AFFECTION.

Oh! in the varied scenes of life,
Is there a joy so sweet,
As when amid its busy strife
Congenial spirits meet?

Feelings and thoughts, a fairy band,
Long hid from mortal sight,
Then start, to meet the master hand,
That calls them into light.

When, turning o'er some gifted page,
How fondly do we pause,
That dear companion to engage
In answering applause!

And when we list to Music's sigh,
How sweet, at every tone,
To read within another's eye
The rapture of our own.
Geranium, Mourning.

DESPONDENCY.

He led her to the altar,
But the bride was not his chosen;
He led her, with a hand as cold
As though its pulse had frozen.
Flowers were crushed beneath his tread,
A gilded dome was o'er him;
But his brow was damp, and his lips were pale,
As the marble steps before him.

His soul was sadly dreaming
Of one he had hoped to cherish;
Of a name and form that the sacred rites,
Beginning, told must perish.
He gazed not on the stars and zems
Of those who circled round him;
But trembled as his lips gave forth
The words that falsely bound him.

* * * * *

Despair had fixed upon his brow
Its deepest, saddest token;
And the bloodless cheek, the stifled sigh,
Betrayed his heart was broken.

WINTER.

I deem thee not unlovely, though thou com'st
With a stern visage. To the tuneful bird,
The blushing flower, the rejoicing stream,
Thy discipline is harsh. But unto man
Methinks thou hast a kindlier ministry.
Thy lengthened eve is full of fireside joys,
And deathless linking of warm heart to heart,
So that the hoarse storm passes by unheard.

L. H. Siaourney.

Old Winter is a frolicksome fellow I wot;
He is wild in his humor, and free;
He'll whistle along for the "want of thought,"
And all the warmth of your furs at naught,
And ruffle the laces the pretty girls bought;
For a frolicksome fellow is he.

A cunning old fellow is Winter, they say,—
A cunning old fellow is he;
He peeps in crevices day by day,
To see how we are passing our time away,
And mark all our doings from grave to gay,—
I'm afraid he is peeping at me.

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS.

He meets the smile of young and old, he wins the praise of all,
He is feasted at the banquet, and distinguished at the ball;
When town grows dull and sultry, he may fly to green retreats,
A welcome visitor in turn at twenty country seats;
He need not seek society, for, do what'er he can,
Invitations and attentions will pursue the single man.

Fathers and brothers anxiously attempt his taste to suit;
O'er manors without number 'tis his privilege to shoot;
Political opponents to his principles concede;
He quaffs the finest burgundy, he rides the fleetest steed;
And never yet were families, since first the world began,
United, blest, and fond as those who court the single man.

HOPE.

Fair Hope, with light and buoyant form,
Came smiling through the clouds of care;
Glanced bright defiance on the storm,
And hung her bow of promise there.

Mrs. Osgood.

Once on a time, from scenes of light,
An angel winged his airy flight;
Down to this earth, in haste he came,
And wrote, in lines of living flame,
These words on every thing he met,
"Cheer up, be not discouraged yet!"

Then back to heaven with speed he flew,
And tuned his golden harp anew;
Whilst the angelic throng came round,
To catch the soul-inspiring sound;
And heaven was filled with new delight,
For Hope had been to earth that night.

SOLITUDE.

To sit on rocky, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell,
And mortal foot hath ne'er, or rarely been;
To climb the trackless mountain all unseen,
With the wild flock that never needs a fold;
Alone o'er steeps and foaming falls to lean;—
This is not solitude; 't is but to hold
Converse with nature's charms, and see her stores unrolled.

But midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men,
To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,
And roam along, the world's tired denizen,
With none to bless us, none whom we can bless.
Minions of splendor shrinking from distress!
None that, with kindred consciousness endued,
If we were not, would seem to smile the less
Of all that flattered, followed, sought and sued;
This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

Byron.
When Friendship or Love, our sympathies move;
When Truth in a glance should appear;
The lips may beguile with a dimple or smile,
But the test of Affection's a Tear.

Too oft is a smile but the hypocrite's wile,
To mark detestation or fear;
Give me the soft sigh, whilst the soul-telling eye
Is dimmed, for a time, with a Tear.

Though my vows I can pour to my Mary no more,
My Mary,—to love once so dear;
In the shade of her bower, I remember the hour
She rewarded those vows with a Tear.

When my soul wings her flight to the regions of night,
And my corse shall recline on its bier;
As ye pass by the tomb, where my ashes consume,
Oh! moisten their dust with a Tear.

May no marble bestow the splendor of woe,
Which the children of vanity rear
No fiction of fame shall blazon my name;
All I ask, all I wish, is a Tear.

I HAVE DREAMED OF THEE.

I dreamed of thee last night, love,
And I thought that one came down
From scenes of azure light, love,
The most beautiful to crown.

He wandered forth where diamonds
And jewels rich and rare
Shone brightly 'mid the glittering thing,
Yet crowned no one there.

He passed by all others,
Till he came to where thou stood;
And crowned thee as most beautiful
Because thou wast so good;

And said, as there he crowned thee,
That goodness did excel
The jewels all around thee
In which beauty seemed to dwell.

For goodness is the beauty
Which will forever last;
Then, crowning thee most beautiful,
From earth to heaven he passed.

HEARTLESSNESS.

Yes, farewell! farewell forever!
Thou thyself hast fixed our doom,
Bade hope's sweetest blossom wither,
Never more for me to bloom.

"Unforgiving" thou hast called me,
Didst thou ever say "forgive"?
For the wretch whose wiles et bralle thee,
Thou didst seem alone to live.

Wrapt in dreams of joy abiding,
On thy breast my head hath lain;
In thy love and truth confiding,
Bliss I cannot know again.

He in whom my soul delighted,
From his heart my image drove,
With contempt my love requited,
And preferred a wanton's love.

But, farewell! — I'll not upbraid thee,
Never, never wish thee ill;
Wretched though thy crimes have made me,
If thou canst, — be happy still.

GRIEF.

RESIGNATION.

Sweet the hour of tribulation,
When the heart can freely sigh
And the tear of resignation
Twinkles in the mournful eye.

MONTGOMERY.

But He, who gave thee vital breath,
Sovereign supreme of life and death!
Has visited thy frame
With sickness, which forbodes thy end;
And heavenward now thy prospects tend,
And soon thy spirit must ascend
To God, from whence it came.

Well, He is good! and surely thou
May'st well in resignation bow,
And gratefully confess,
That this, his awful wise decree,
Though hard to us, is kind to thee;
Since Death's dark portals will but be
The gate of happiness.

FRIENDSHIP.

I had a friend that loved me;
I was his soul; he lived not but in me;
We were so close within each other's breast,
The rivets were not found that joined us first,
That doth not reach us yet; we were so mixed,
As meeting streams; both to ourselves were lost.
We were one mass,—we could not give or take,
But from the same; for he was I; I, he:
Return, my better half, and give me all myself,
For thou art all!
If I have any joy when thou art absent,
I grudge it to myself; methinks I rob
Thee of thy part.

PENSIVE BEAUTY

And oh! how oft have I turned away
From a brighter eye and a cheek more gay;
That my soul might drink, to sweet excess,
The light of her pensive loveliness!

Art thou not near me, with thy earnest eyes,
That weep forth sympathy? — thy holy brow,
Whereon such sweet imaginings do rise:
Art thou not near me, when I call thee now,
Maid of my childhood's vow?

* * *

Now I behold thee, with thy sorrowing smile,
And thy deep soul uplooking from thy face;
While sweetly crossed upon thy breast the while,
Thy white hands do thy holy heart embrace,
In its calm dwelling place!

O, agony! keen agony,
For trusting heart to find,
That vows believed were vows conceived,
As light as summer wind.

O, agony! fierce agony,
For loving heart to brook,
In one brief hour, the withering power
Of unimpassioned look.

O, agony! deep agony,
For heart that's proud and high,
To learn of Fate how desolate
It may be ere it die.

O, agony! sharp agony,
To find how loath to part
With the fickleness and faithlessness
That break a trusting heart!

COLD HEARTED.

Better the tie at once be broken,

Than watch him, one by one, destroy

Than thus to see them, day by day,
Beneath his coldness fade away.

Affection beyond the grave

Haste! messenger to heaven, and bear
These tidings to the souls we love:
Tell them we have been faithful here,
Since they left us to dwell above.

Haste! tell them we do not forget,
That we will remember ever;
That when on earth our sun hath set,
We shall meet no more to sever.

That our love is that which liveth.
When from earth, friends pass away;
And the tear affection giveth,
On the sorrowing, parting day;—

Seals the bond by which we know,
We shall meet, no more to part;
And that, freed from care and woe,
Heart shall sweetly blend with heart.

YOU PUZZLE ME

When of a man I ask the question,
I wish he would answer, "Yes," or "No;"
Nor stop to make some smooth evasion,
And always tell me, "May be so."

I always doubt the friendly meaning
Of, "Well," "Perhaps," "I do not know;"
When for a favor I am suing,
I rather hear the answer,—"No."

When of a friend I wish to borrow
A little cash, to hear him say,
"I've none to-day, but on to-morrow;"
Is worse than if he told me "Nay."

Why all this neer' of plastering over
What we in fact intend to show?
Why not at once, with much less labor,
Say frankly, "Yes, my friend," or "No"?

And when I ask that trembling question,
"Will you be mine, my dearest Miss?"
I wish you, without hesitation,
To say distinctly,—"Yes, sir, yes."
Linden Tree.

MATRIMONY.

Oh! take her, but be faithful still,
And may the bridal vow
Be sacred held in after years,
And warmly breathed as now;
Remember 'tis no common tie
That binds her youthful heart:
'Tis one that only truth should weave,
And only death can part.

The joys of childhood's happy hour,
The home of riper years;
The treasured scenes of early youth
In sunshine and in tears;
The purest hopes her bosom knew,
When her young heart was free,—
All these and more she now resigns,
To brave the world with thee.

* * * *

Then take her, and may fleeting time
Mark only joys increase;
And may your days glide sweetly on
In happiness and peace.

FIRST EMOTION OF LOVE

Away with those fictions of flimsy romance!
Those tissues of falsehood which folly has wove!
Give me the mild beam of the love-breathing glance,
Or the rapture that dwells on the first kiss of love.

Ye rhymers whose bosoms with phantasy glow,
Whose pastoral passions are made for the grove,
From what blest inspiration your sonnets would flow,
Could you ever have tasted the first kiss of love.

When age chills the blood, when our pleasures are past,—
For years fleet away with the wings of the dove,—
The dearest remembrance will still be the last;
Our sweetest memorial, the first kiss of love.

BYRON.

There, on the banks of that bright river born,
The flowers that hung above its wave at morn,
Blest not the waters as they murmured by,
With holier scent and lustre, than the sigh
And virgin glance of first affection cast
Upon their youth's smooth current as it past.

Still I should long to leap the crystal walls.

Dryden

There is a world where souls are free,
Where tyrants taint not nature's bliss:
If death that world's bright opening be,
Oh! who would live a slave in this?

Thomas Moore.

O Liberty! the prisoner's pleasing dream,
The poet's muse, his passion and his theme;
Genius is thine, and thou art Fancy's nurse;
Lost without thee the ennobling powers of verse;
Heroic song from thy free touch acquires
Its clearest tone, the rapture it inspires.
Place me where winter breathes his keenest air,
And I will sing, if Liberty be there;
And I will sing at Liberty's dear feet,
In Afric's torrid zone, or India's fiercest heat.

LIFE.

Tell me not in mournful numbers,
Life is but an empty dream!
For the soul is dead that slumbers,

Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.

Life's little stage is a small eminence.

Where dwells the multitude: we gaze around,
We read their monuments: we sigh; and while
We sigh, we sink; and are what we deplored;
Lamenting, or lamented, all our lot!

Would'st thou from Love a reason seek?

MY BEST DAYS ARE GONE.

'T is wondrous strange, how great the change,
Since I was in my teens!
Then I had beaux and billet-doux,
And joined the gayest scenes.
But lovers now have ceased to vow,—
No way they can contrive
To poison, hang, or drown themselves,—
Because I 'm twenty-five.

Once if the night were e'er so bright,
I ne'er abroad could roam,
Without, — "The bliss, the honor, Miss,
Of seeing you safe home."
But now I go, through rain and snow,—
Pursued, and scarce alive,—
Through all the dark, without a spark,—
Because I 'm twenty-five.

Oh dear! — 't is queer that every year
I 'm slighted more and more;
For not a beau pretends to show
His head within our door.

MATERNAL LOVE.

Love, that watched my early years
With conflicting hopes and fears;
Love, that through life's flowery May
Led my childhood, prone to stray;
Love, that still directs my youth
With the constancy of Truth,
Heightens every bliss it shares,
Softens and divides the cares,
Smiles away my light distress,
Weeps for joy or tenderness; —
May that love to latest age,
Cheer my earthly pilgrimage;
May that love, o'er death victorious,
Rise beyond the grave more glorious;
Souls, united here, would be
One to all eternity.

MONTGOMERY.

ASPIRINGS.

Higher, higher will we climb
Up the mount of glory,
That our names may live through time
In our country's story;
Happy when her welfare calls,
He who conquers, he who falls.

Deeper, deeper let us toil
In the mines of knowledge,—
Nature's wealth and learning's spoil
Win from school and college;
Delve we there for richer gems
Than the stars of diadems

Onward, onward will we press
Through the path of duty;
Virtue is true happiness,
Excellence true beauty:
Minds are of supernal birth,
Let us make a heaven of earth.

Thou false baptized, who by thy vaunted name
Of glory stealest o'er the ear of man
To rive his bosom with thy thousand darts,
Disrobed of pomp and circumstance, stand forth,
And show thy written league with sin and death.
Yes, ere Ambition's heart is seared and sold,
And desolated, bid him mark thine end,
And count thy wages.

The proud victor's plume.
The hero's trophied fame, the warrior's wreath
Of blood-dashed laurel,—what will these avail

Is better passport at the gate of Heaven.

Why bring those images to view
I henceforth must resign?
Ah! why those happy hours renew
That never can be mine?

Past pleasure doubles present pain,
To sorrow adds regret;
Regret and hope are both in vain;
I ask but to—forget.

You 'll be forgotten—as old debts
By persons who are used to borrow;
Forgotten—as the sun that sets,
When shines a new one on the morrow;
Forgotten—like the luscious peach,
That blest the school-boy last September;
Forgotten—like a maiden speech
Which all men praise, but none remember.

FORGET ME NOT.

Forget me not, — forget me not;
But let these little simple flowers
Remind thee of his lonely lot,
Who loved thee in life’s purest hours;
When hearts and hopes were hallowed things,
Ere gladness broke the lyre she brought:
Then, oh! when shivered all its strings,
Forget me not, — forget me not!

We met, ere yet the world had come
To wither up the springs of youth;
Amid the holy joys of home,
And in the first warm blush of youth.
We parted, as they never part,
Whose tears are doomed to be forgot!
Oh! by that agony of heart,
Forget me not, — forget me not!

Patriotism.

Give me the death of those
Who for their country die;
And oh! be mine like their repose,
When cold and low they lie!
Their loveliest mother earth
Enshrines the fallen brave;
In her sweet lap who gave them birth,
They find their tranquil grave.

SLANDER.

No, 't is slander;
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Cvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world; kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave,
This viperous slander enters.

Shakespeare.

For slander lives upon succession;
For ever housed, where it once gets possession.

I know that slander loves a lofty mark:
It saw her soar a flight above her fellows,
And hurled its arrow to her glorious height,
To reach her height, and bring her to the ground.

DARK THOUGHTS.

I loved, — but those I loved are gone;
    Had friends, — my early friends are fled:
How cheerless feels the heart alone,
    When all its former hopes are dead!
Though gay companions o'er the bowl
    Dispel awhile the sense of ill,
Though pleasure stirs the maddening soul,
    The heart — the heart is lonely still.

How dull to hear the voice of those Whom Rank or Chance, whom Wealth or Power,
Have made, though neither friends nor foes,
    Associates of the festive hour!

Fain would I fly the haunts of men, —
    I seek to shun — not hate mankind;
My breast requires the sullen glen,
    Whose gloom may suit a darkened mind.
Oh, that to me the wings were given
    Which bear the turtle to her nest!
Then would I cleave the vault of heaven,
    To flee away and be at rest.

Beware the awful avalanche!"
This was the peasant's last good-night;
A voice replied far up the height,

At break of day, as heavenward
The pious monks of Saint Bernard
Uttered the oft-repeated prayer,
A voice cried through the startled air,

Half-buried in the snow was found,
Still grasping in his hand of ice
That banner with the strange device,
Excelsior!

There in the twilight cold and gray,
Lifeless, but beautiful he lay.

Peace.

The angel's song, that happy night
When spirits stooped to mortal ken,
Warbled from lips and lyres of light,—
Was peace on earth, good will to men.

In peace the sages came and paid
Their meed of gold, and spice, and myrrh;
And why such bliss on Mary laid?
She felt that peace had come to her

Peace was the theme, when precepts dropt
From Jesus' lips, like his own dew;
Who oped their eyes? Who ears unstopt?
His name was Peace,—'t was all they knew.

Wm. B. Tappan

And leafless bowers and frowning skies
Afford a sad and dreary scene;
Yet will the heart bright verdure wear,
If Peace has fixed its dwelling there.

THINK OF ME.

Go, where the water glideth gentle ever,— Glideth by meadows that the greenest be;
Go, listen to our own beloved river,
And think of me.

Wander in forests, where the small flower layeth
Its fairy gem beside the giant tree;
List to the dim brook pining, while it playeth,
And think of me.

Watch when the sky is silver pale at even,
And the wind grieveth in the lonely tree;
Go out beneath the solitary heaven,
And think of me.

And when the Moon riseth, as she was dreaming,
And treadeth with white feet the lulled sea;
Go, silent as a star beneath her beaming,
And think of me.

RELIGIOUS FERVOR.

I asked her when in beauty dressed,
When youthful hope inspired her breast,
Where dwelleth he whom thou loveth best?
She said — in Heaven.

I asked her when she fondly prest
Her smiling infant to her breast,
Where dwelleth he whom thou loveth best?
She said — in Heaven.

I asked her when her bloom was lost,
When all her earthly hopes were crossed,
Where dwelleth he whom thou loveth best?
She said — in Heaven.

I asked her in the dying gloom,
Who is the brightest loveliest one?
'Tis God, she cried, my God alone;
And went — to Heaven.

AN APPOINTED MEETING.

Meet me to-night in the path which lies
By the side of the woodland hollow;
The moon will have oped her silver eyes,
And tell thee which path to follow.

Then tripping along to thy footstep's sound,
Thy lip to thy heart will be humming;
If thy glance for a moment turn around,
'T will assure thee, love, I'm coming.

Oh! do not fear, not a tone will break,
On earth or in air, that can chide thee:
If a lovely rose perchance to awake,
'T will loop its bloom beside thee.

Come meet me at the evening's hour
When summer winds are still,
Within the memory-haunted bower,
Beside the gushing rill.

THIS HEART IS THINE

By the gloom that shades my heart,
When, fair girl, from thee I part,
By the deep impassioned sigh,
Half suppressed when thou art nigh
By the heaving of my breast,
When thy hand by mine is pressed;
By these fervent sighs betrayed;
Canst thou doubt my truth, sweet maid?

Then say, oh! say you love me.

Heart and soul more fond than mine,
Trust me, never can be thine;
Heart and soul, whose passion pure,
Long as life shall thus endure.
Take, oh! take me; let me live
On the hope thy smiles can give;
See me kneel before my throne;
Take, oh! take me, for thine own,

And say, oh! say you love me.

WORDS WORTH.

SWEET REMEMBRANCES.

Can I forget, — canst thou forget,
When playing with thy golden hair,
How quick thy fluttering heart did move?
Oh! by my soul, I see thee yet,
With eyes so languid, breast so fair,
And lips, though silent, breathing love.

When thus reclining on my breast,
Those eyes threw back a glance so sweet,
As half reproached, yet raised desire;
And still we near and nearer prest,
And still our glowing lips would meet,
As if in kisses to expire.

And then those sens'ive eyes would close,
And bid their lids each other seek,
Veiling the azure orbs below;
While their long lashes' darkening gloss
Seemed stealing o'er thy brilliant cheek,
Like raven's plumage smoothed on snow.

THOU ART LESS PROUD THAN THEY DEEM THEE.

They deem thee proud, but do not know
The soul that dwells within thee:
They would not bend the neck so low
As thou, e'en could they win thee.

'Tis pride that dwells within their hearts;
And thine the polished mirror,
Reflecting back their proudest parts,
Yet blind to their own error—

They deem thee proud, and say that thou
Should'st bow and be more humble;
They call thee back to bend and bow
At faults o'er which they stumble.

I've known thee long, and know full well
The soul that dwells within thee;
And to those who deem thee proud, can tell,
That pride was never in thee.

BURY ME AMID NATURE'S BEAUTIES.

Oh! make me a grave on the marge of that stream
Where often in youth's gladsome morning I strayed;
Where the song of the lark, at Aurora's first beam,
Awakes from their slumbers the flowers of the glade,—
Near the wide-spreading hazel, where lambkins repose,
Like snow-wreaths unmouched by the sun's melting ray,
Whose branches the nest of the linnet enclose,
While the thrush sweetly sings from its dew-dropping spray.

Where the hawthorn's rich perfume is borne on the gale,
And wild scattered flowerets yield sweets to the bee,
How oft have I roved through that thyme-scented vale,
My heart like the mountain-breeze buoyant and free!

OUR SOULS ARE UNITED.

They were together night and day
Through all their early years,—
Had the same fancies, feelings, thoughts,
Joys, sorrows, hopes, and fears;
They had a fellowship of smiles,
A fellowship of tears.

If one were gay, through both their hearts
The tide of rapture rushed;
If one were sad, the voice of joy
In both their hearts was hushed;
Yea, all their thoughts and sympathies
From the same fountain gushed.

There is a mystic thread of life,
So dearly wreathed with mine alone,
That Destiny’s relentless knife
At once must sever both or none!

Whose voice is on the wind;
Yet when the stars from their bright spheres,
Like living flames are hurled,
Thy mighty form will sink beneath
The ruins of a world!

And then it seemed
As if from every mound and sepulchre
In that lone cemetery,— from the sward
Where slept the span-long infant, to the grave
Of him who dandled on his wearied knee
Three generations,— from the turf that veiled
The wreck of mouldering beauty, to the bed
Where shrank the loathed beggar,— rose a cry

INCONSTANCY.

The more divinely beautiful thou art,
Lady! of Love's inconstancy beware;
Watch o'er thy charms, and with an angel's care
Oh! guard thy maiden purity of heart;
At every whisper of temptation start;
The lightest breathings of unhallowed air,
Love's tender, trembling lustre will impair,
Till all the light of innocence depart.

MONTGOMERY.

Oh! cold inconstancy!
This is not woman's love: her love should be
A feeling pure and holy as the flame

As the young dove, and changeless as the faith
The martyr seals in blood.

CONSO LATION OF SLEEP

Ye know not what ye do,
That call the slumberer back
From the world unseen by you,
Unto life's dim faded track

Her soul is far away,
In her childhood's land perchance,
Where her young sisters play,
Where shines her mother's glance.

Some old sweet native sound
Her spirit haply weaves;
A harmony profound
Of woods with all their leaves;

A murmur of the sea,
A laughing tone of streams;
Long may her sojourn be
In the music-land of dreams!

Each voice of love is there,
Each gleam of beauty fled;
Each lost one still more fair,—
Oh! lightly, lightly tread.

EARLY YOUTH.

Who, for all that age can bring,
Would forget life's budding spring?
Hours of frolic! school-boy days!
Full of merry pranks and plays;
When the untaught spirit beats
With a thousand wild conceits;
When each pleasure, bright and new,
Sparkles fresh with heavenly dew;
When the light that shines abroad
Seems the very smile of God; —
Who, in after toil and strife,
Would forget the morn of life?

R. C. WATELSTON.

Gay hope is theirs, by fancy fed,
Less pleasing when possesst;
The tear forgot as soon as shed,
The sunshine of the breast:
Theirs buxom health of rosy hue,
Wild wit, invention ever new,
And lively cheer, of vigor born;
The thoughtless day, the easy night,
The spirits pure, the slumbers light,
That fly the approach of morn.

DISSENSION.

We have been friends together
In sunshine and in shade,
Since first beneath the chestnut trees
In infancy we played.

But coldness dwells within thy heart,
A cloud is on thy brow;
We have been friends together,—
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been gay together;
We have laughed at little jests;
For the fount of hope was gushing
Warm and joyous in our breasts.

But laughter now hath fled thy lip,
And sullen glooms thy brow;
We have been gay together,—
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been sad together,
We have wept with bitter tears,
O'er the grass-grown graves, where slumbered
The hopes of early years.

The voices which are silent there
Would bid thee clear thy brow:
We have been sad together,—
Oh! what shall part us now?

WOMAN'S LOVE.

When all the world grows strange,
Still shall her arms enfold thee;
When smiling fortunes change,
Still shall her words uphold thee.

When all thy hopes shall fail,
And leave thee nought but care;
And when thy cheek grows pale,
Or wasted with despair; —

When desolation meets thee
Without an arm to save;
When Death himself shall greet thee,
A victim for the grave; —

Then woman shall caress thee
With all an angel's care;
Then shall she softly bless thee
With more than angel's prayer.

HOPE IN ADVERSITY

What though from life's bounties thou mayst have fallen?
And what though thy sun in dark clouds may have set?
There is a bright star that illumes yon horizon,
It telleth thee loudly, — "There's hope for thee yet."

This earth may look dull, old friends may forsake thee,
And sorrows that never before thou hast met
May roll o'er thy head, yet the bright star before thee
Shines to remind thee, — "There's hope for thee yet."

'Tis but folly to mourn, though fortune disdain thee,
Though never so darkly thy sun may have set;
'Tis wisdom to gaze at the bright star before thee,
And shout as you gaze, — "There is hope for me yet."

YOU ARE PERFECT.

Admired Miranda!
Indeed the top of admiration; worth
What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
I have eyed with best regard; and many a time
The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear; for several virtues
Have I liked several women; never any
With so full soul but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owned,
And put it to the foil. But you, oh! you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best.

Shakspeare.

I never saw a form before
Of such unrivalled loveliness,
Nor one who was of earth, who wore
The look of heaven upon her face.
I never knew a heart so kind,
Such tears for others' misery flow,
Nor saw a hand so gladly bind
The crushed and bleeding heart of woe.

Miss P. Carey.

YOU ARE RADIANT WITH CHARMS.

We met, 't was in the merry dance,
I only caught thine eye;
A look, a smile, a hurried word,
And thou hadst floated by:
But sweeter than an angel's face,
Or Houri's smile at even,
Or music on the moonlit tide,
Was that one glimpse of heaven.

We parted, and we never met
Since on that festive scene;
Yet still I see thy golden curls,
And eye of blue serene.
Thy snowy arm, and heaving bust,
And form of wavy grace,—
How oft, at twilight's dreamy hour,
That meeting I retrace!
"Proud be the rose, with rains and dews Her head impearling." — Wordsworth.

BEAUTY.

I see her now. How more than beautiful She paces yon o'roard terrace! The free wind Has lifted the soft curls from off her cheek, Which yet it crimsons not, — the pure, the pale, — Like a young saint. How delicately carved The Grecian outline of her face! — but touched With a more spiritual beauty, and more meek, Her large blue eyes are raised up to the heavens, Whose hues they wear, and seem to grow more clear As the heart fills them. There, those parted lips, — Prayer could but give such voiceless eloquence, — Shining like snow her clasped and earnest hands, — She seems a dedicated nun, whose heart Is God's own altar.

EXCESS IS DANGEROUS.

With two spurs or one, and no great matter which;
Boots bought or boots borrowed, a whip or a switch,
Five shillings or less for the hire of his beast,
Paid part into hand; — you must wait for the rest.
Thus equipped, Academicus climbs up his horse,
And out they both sally for better or worse;
His heart void of fear, and as light as a feather,
And in violent haste to go, not knowing whither;
Through the fields and the towns, (see!) he scampers alone,
And is looked at, and laughed at, by old and by young,
Till at length overspent, and his sides smeared with blood,
Down tumbles his horse, man and all, in the mud,
In a wagon or chaise, shall he finish his route?
Oh! scandalous fate! he must do it on foot.

YOU ARE DAZZLING, BUT DANGEROUS.

Saved from the perils of the stormy wave,
And faint with toil, the wanderer of the main,
But just escaped from shipwreck’s billowy grave,
Trembles to hear its horrors named again.

How warm his vow, that Ocean’s fairest mien
No more shall lure him from the smiles of home!
Yet soon, forgetting each terrific scene,
Once more he turns, o’er boundless deeps to roam.

Lady! thus I, who vainly oft in flight
Seek refuge from the dangers of thy sight,
Make the firm vow, to shun thee and be free;
But my fond heart, devoted to its chain,
Still draws me back where countless perils reign,
And grief and ruin spread their snares for me.

THOUGHTS OF HEAVEN.

Forget this world, my restless sprite,
    Turn, turn thy thoughts to heaven;
There must thou soon direct thy flight,
    If errors are forgiven.
To bigots and to sects unknown,
    Bow down beneath the Almighty's throne,—
To him address thy trembling prayer;
He who is merciful and just
    Will not reject a child of dust,
Although his meanest care.

Oh! beautiful is heaven, and bright
    With long, long summer days;
I see its lilies gleam in light,
    Where many a fountain plays.

Oh! Heaven is where no secret dread
    May haunt Love's meeting hour;
Where, from the past, no gloom is shed
    O'er the heart's chosen bower;

Where every severed wreath is bound;
    And none have heard the knell
That smites the soul in that wild sound,—
    "Farewell! beloved, farewell!"

DISGUISE.

Oh! do not suppose that my hours
Are always unclouded and gay;
Or that thorns never mix with the flowers
That fortune has strewned in my way.
When seen by the cold and unfeeling,
We smile through the sorrows we feel;
But smiles are deceitful,—concealing
The wounds which they never can heal.

Our moments of mirth may be many,
And hope half our sorrows beguile;
But, believe me, there cannot be any
Whose features wear ever a smile.
The heart may be sad and repining,
Though cheerfulness brightens the scene;
As a goblet with gems may be shining,
Though bitter the portion within.

A glittering volume may cover
A story of sorrow and woe;
And night's gayest meteors may hover
Where danger lies lurking below:
Thus oft in the sunshine of gladness
The cheek and the eye may be drest,
Whilst the clouds of dejection and sadness
In secret o'ershadow the breast.

W I T.

In her bower a widow dwelt,
At her feet three lovers knelt;
Each adored the widow much,
Each essayed her heart to touch:
One had wit, and one had gold;—
One was cast in beauty's mould:
Guess which was it won the prize,—
Tongue, or purse, or handsome eyes?

First began the handsome man;
Peeping proudly o'er her fan:
Red his lips, and white his skin,—
Could such beauty fail to win?
Then stepped forth the man of gold;
Cash he counted, coin he told;
Wealth the burden of the tale,—
Could such golden projects fail?

Then the man of wit and sense
Wooed her with his eloquence;
Now she heard him with a sigh,—
Then she blushed, scarce knowing why,—
Then she smiled to hear him speak,—
Then a tear was on her cheek:
Beauty, vanish,— Gold, depart!
Wit hath won the widow's heart.

Sweet girl, though only once we met,
That meeting I shall ne'er forget;
And though we ne'er may meet again,
Remembrance will thy form retain.
I would not say, "I love," but still
My senses struggle with my will;
In vain to drive thee from my breast,

In vain I check the rising sighs,
Another to the last replies;
Perhaps this is not love, but yet
Our meeting I can ne'er forget.

She never feels the spleen's imagined pains,
Nor melancholy stagnates in her veins;
She never loses life in thoughtless ease,
Nor on the velvet couch invites disease:
Her homespun dress in simple neatness lies,
And for no glaring equipage she sighs;
Her reputation, which is all her boast,
In a malicious visit ne'er was lost;
No midnight masquerade her beauty wears,
And health, not paint, the fading bloom repairs.

Gay.

Low was our pretty cot; our tallest rose
Peeped at the chamber window. We could hear,
At silent noon, and eve, and early morn,
The sea's faint murmur. In the open air
Our myrtles blossomed, and across the porch
Thick jasmines twined; the little landscape round
Was green and woody, and refreshed the eve.
It was a spot which you might aptly call
The Valley of Seclusion.

Colfridge.
Venus's Looking Glass.

FLATTERY.

Nor think this flattery! I've been taught
One maxim worth receiving,
Wh'ch every passing day has brought
Fresh motive for believing:

That flattery no excuse can find!
'T is loathed as soon as tasted,
When offered to a well-taught mind;
And on a fool 't is wasted.    B. Barton.

The love of praise, how'er concealed by art,
Reigns, more or less, and glows in every heart:
The proud, to gain it, toils on toils endure;
The modest shun it but to make it sure.
O'er globes and sceptres, now on thrones it swells,
Now trims the midnight lamp in college cells.
'T is Tory, Whig! it plots, prays, preaches, pleads;
Harangues in senates, squeaks in masquerades;
Here, to S—e's humor makes a bold pretence;
There, bolder aims at Pult'ney's eloquence.
It aids the dancer's heel, the writer's head,
And heaps the plain with mountains of the dead.
Nor ends with life; but nods in sable plumes,
Adorns our hearse, and flatters on our tombs.

Young.

HAVE I CAUGHT YOU AT LAST!

Have I caught you at last? I've been trying
    For many and many a day;
And indeed I have almost been dying
    For fear that you 'd answer me — "Nay."

Have I caught you at last? now do tell me,
    For I never shall love you less;
For the thoughts that to love thee, impel me,
    Since you heartily answered me — "Yes."

   JOHN S. ADAMS.

With others of the sisterhood."

JOHN KEATS.

ARTIFICE.

Let me see him once more
For a moment or two;
Let him tell me himself
Of his purpose, dear, do;
Let him gaze in these eyes,
While he lays out his plan
To escape me — and then —
He may go — if he can!

Let me see him once more,
Let me give him one smile,
Let me breathe but one word
Of endearment the while;
I ask but that moment, —
My life on the man!
Does he think to forget me?
He may — if he can.

MAY YOU BE HAPPY.

* * * * *

Mayst thou live in joy for ever,
Nought from thee true pleasure sever;
From thy heart arise no sigh,
And no tear bedew thine eye;
Joys be many, cares be few,
Smooth the path thou shalt pursue,
And Heaven's richest blessings shine
Ever on both thee and thine.

Round thy path may fairest flowers,
As in amaranthine bowers,
Bloom and blossom bright and fair,—
Load with sweets the ambient air;
Be thy path with roses strown,
And thy hours to care unknown;
Sorrow cloud thy pathway never,
And happiness be thine for ever.

FIDELITY IN AdVERSITY

Fondly I wreathed his victor brow:
Shall I in grief forsake him now?
Never. The ills that round him wait
But bind me closer to his fate.
In winter's cold, in summer's heat,
Long as the pulse of life may beat,
Shall Ellen at Alonzo's side,
By day, by night, the wanderer guide:
On mine, his wearied brow shall rest,
And sweet his sleep on Ellen's breast.

WILLIAM DOWNEY

She stems the wave, unshrinking meets the storm,
And wears his guardian angel's earthly form!
And if she cannot check the tempest's course,
She points a shelter from its overwhelming force!
When envy's sneer would coldly blight his name,
And busy tongues are sporting with his fame,
Who solves each doubt, — clears every mist away,
And makes him radiant in the face of day?
She who would peril fortune, fame, and life,
For man, the ingrate, — the devoted wife.

MRS. C. B. WILSON.

FIDELITY.

Her hands were clasped, her dark eyes raised,
The breeze threw back her hair;
Up to the fearful wheel she gazed,—
All that she loved was there.
The night was round her clear and cold,
The holy heaven above,
Its pale stars watching to behold
The might of earthly love.

"And bid me not depart," she cried,
"My Rudolph, say not so!
This is no time to quit thy side,
Peace, peace! I cannot go.
Hath the world aught for me to fear,
When death is on thy brow?
The world! what means it?—mine is here,—
I will not leave thee now."

* * * * *

She spread her mantle o'er his breast,
She bathed his lips with dew;
And on his cheeks such kisses pressed
As hope and joy ne'er knew. Mrs. HEMANS.

PURITY

* * * *

Pure as an infant's heart that sin ne'er touched,
And guilt had ne'er polluted; and she seemed
Most like an angel that had missed its way
On some kind mission Heaven had bade it go.
Her eye beamed bright with beauty; and innocence
Its dulcet notes breathed forth in every word,
Was seen in every motion that she made.
Her form was faultless, and her golden hair
In long luxuriant tresses floated o'er
Her shoulders, that as alabaster shone.
Her very look seemed to impart a sense
Of matchless purity to all it met.
I saw her in the crowd; yet none were there
That seemed so pure as she; and every eye
That met her eye's mild glance, shrink back abashed,
It spake such innocence.

MELANCHOLY

Stay, melancholy muser, stay,
And tell me all thy sorrow;
The rose that droops in tears to-day,
May rise in smiles to-morrow:
Ah! yes, when only wet with dew
Of nature's balmy breathing,
Its glories may awake anew,
While beams are round it wreathing

But that o'er which the chilling blast
Has wildly, darkly driven,
And rudely scattered as it past,
The charm it caught from heaven;
Too sadly feels the coming day,
That others joy in viewing,
Will only bring a brighter ray
To smile upon its ruin.

With eyes upraised, as one inspired,
Pale Melancholy sat retired;
And from her mild, sequestered seat,
In notes, by distance made more sweet,
Poured through the mellow horn her pensive soul.

FRATERNAL LOVE.

We are but two, — the others sleep
Through death's untroubled night;
We are but two, — oh! let us keep
The link that binds us bright.

Heart leaps to heart, — the sacred flood
That warms us is the same;
That good old man, — his honest blood
Alike we fondly claim.

We in one mother's arms were locked, —
Long be her love repaid;
In the same cradle we were rocked,
Round the same hearth we played.

Our boyish sports were all the same,
Each little joy and woe;
Let manhood keep alive the flame,
Lit up so long ago.

We are but two, — be that the band
To hold us till we die;
Shoulder to shoulder let us stand,
Till side by side we lie.

Charles Sprague.

JOY.

Think not him joyful who doth wear
   Ever a smile, — 'tis but to hide
The troubled thoughts of anxious care
   That in his inmost heart abide.

Think not him joyful who has wealth,
   Whom fortune favors with her gold;
It cannot buy the flush of health; —
   True joy is neither bought nor sold.

But think him joyful, call him blest,
   Who round his path hath friends to love:
Who has a conscience well at rest,
   And puts his trust in One above.

Ay, he is joyful! he can brave
   The world with its besetting care;
And when the portals of the grave
Open to view, — be joyful there.

JOHN S. ADAMS.

ABSENCE.

'Tis not the loss of love's assurance,
It is not doubting what thou art;
But 'tis the too, too long endurance
Of absence, that afflicts my heart.

Absence! is not the soul torn by it
From more than light, or life, or breath
'Tis Lethe's gloom, but not its quiet,—
The pain, without the peace, of death!

THOMAS CAMPBELL.

Believe not that absence can banish
The memory of moments gone by;
Could I deem they so slightly would vanish,
I should think on the past with a sigh.

BERNARD BARTON.

But oh! it is more soothing still,
To feel a fond hope, when we sever;
Absence cannot affection chill,
And we may meet more dear than ever.

BERNARD BARTON.
